Honors Divided In Performance Of Mexican Play

Romantic days of Old Mexico, written into a lovely drama, "El Aguila," by Bruce McDaniel and directed by Webster Hall, were revived and presented in the patio of the House of Neighborly Service by young people of the Mexican colony last evening. The play, which was offered in preview last evening to members of the Mexican colony, will be given two public performances tonight and tomorrow evening.

Beautiful in every detail, the play proved one of the most attractive presentations offered in Redlands this season. Further than that, the entertainment must be credited entirely to Redlands, from the authorship down to the stagehands.

Lovely in setting, the play is offered in the attractive patio of the House, which has been enhanced by a stone fountain and lovely old relics of days in Mexico. In this setting the young actors, many of whom have been seen in Redlands high school musical productions, present the romantic lines of Mr. McDaniel's drama, in which the old favorite story of the young senorita, sought in marriage by the brave El Capitan and the daring romantic El Aguila, is told in new form.

Rich, colorful costumes, authentic music of Old Mexico played by a stringed orchestra, songs and dances by the young actors, enrich the beauty and color of the story. No detail has been left out to make the entertainment one to be remembered.

Residents of the city, who owe so much of their heritage to Mexico, will do well to attend one of the two performances. Not only will they derive two hours of worthwhile entertainment from the program, but they will contribute to the improvement of the welfare of many families. It is the hope of Mr. McDaniel, if the performances to come are successful, that the play may be an annual tradition.

Those Redlands film fans who "get a kick out of" Maurice Chevalier will have an opportunity to see their favorite at the Fox-Redlands theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, when he appears in "Love Me Tonight."

Not only Chevalier will be shining on the screen, but also those other favorites, Charles Ruggles, Charles Butterworth, Jeanette MacDonald and Myrna Loy.

"Love Me Tonight" is a typical story for the man with the Hapsburg lip. He is Maurice Courtelin, "the best little tailor in all France," who, after filling an order for 16 suits of clothes, enters the home of a duke in an effort to collect. On the way there and in the home he attempts to make love to the Princess Jeanette, with the usual mirthful complications.

Wednesday and Thursday bring to the Fox-Redlands screen the mystery story, "Doctor X." Thrill and surprises come when "Doctor X" and his associates are brought under the suspicion of the police through a series of murders, always committed at the full of the moon. There is a love story, developed
